

Students and faculty connect with community at Global Café. People share traditions and cultures, learn about local opportunities, discover common experiences, and meet new friends. Travelers strengthen their language skills and explore international customs. We welcome people from across our community and around the world.

Global Café has been created by campus and community partners of the Center for Community-Based Partnerships: Capstone International Center, Graduate Parent Support, Tuscaloosa's One Place, CCBP student team, Shelton State Community College, Tuscaloosa City Schools, the Tuscaloosa County School System, and numerous community leaders. Throughout the year, the planning and implementation of programs offer students exciting new paths to campus leadership, and we invite participation from individuals who share our goal of an active community.

The Center for Community-Based Partnerships is an initiative of the Office of Community Affairs of The University of Alabama. Its role is to connect faculty, staff, students, and community partners in research-based projects designed to solve critical problems identified collaboratively.
